A new meatball for jazz lovers MIDDLESEX CITY — JT Harrell, founder of the famed Blue Grass Jazz festival, has long had a passion for jazz music. Now, he is also passionate about meatballs — particularly meatballs with "Carolina" style barbecue sauce. Harrell announced plans for a new restaurant, The Carolina Meatball Kitchen, in a statement on the festival's website. The restaurant, which will open in May next year, will be housed in the four-level Music Factory, a new structure and education center for the festival that opened in February 2013. Harrell described the new restaurant as a "music-themed restaurant serving meatballs." "The menu will feature a selection of famous barbecue meatballs that JT Harrell has personally tweaked and developed over his long career," the festival statement said. "They will include a variety of sauces, including the BBQ, the Chili and a new Carolina Style Sauce that blends Carolina barbecue with a southern flavor." Harrell said the restaurant will be led by executive chef Erick Triana, formerly chef at renowned restaurant Eddie V's Pizza, and that the kitchen will use only local and organic ingredients. "This restaurant is very special to me," Harrell said. "It will take a place in my heart forever." 0cc13bf012
