My character has a speech option that reads: Sullenly, his visor turns a darker red as he takes a measure of his adversary, correcting his balance. There's also: If you pause, your actions will be paused as well. Sometimes I'm being played fairly straight, and other times, I'm definitely meant to brood and act sorrowful. I'd like to make sure that this phrase works in either situation. A: It's not wrong in either situation. The character is supposed to be making a choice for different reasons and be making the choice in a certain way. In one situation he is choosing a lack of action, and in the other he is choosing brooding and thoughtful. The key to making a good choice is to be clear what the character is choosing for. There are a couple of things about your phrase: If you pause, your actions will be paused as well. This is reasonable, though you can omit the first comma. Sullenly, his visor turns a darker red as he takes a measure of his adversary, correcting his balance. This is very unclear because: It doesn't match the behavior of the character. The visor is supposed to darken, not turn red. It doesn't match the behavior of the character. Being silent is supposed to be an action, not a state. It makes no sense, because the visor is supposed to darken. The first problem is easy to fix. Replace the last part with: His visor quickly darkens to indicate his intention. The second problem 0cc13bf012

Combined transurethral resection and cryotherapy of prostate: a perioperative and postoperative assessment of procedure. Forty-eight patients with adenoma of the prostate underwent combined transurethral resection and cryotherapy. A detailed assessment of perioperative and postoperative results was performed. The median total operative time was 39 minutes, the median first voiding time was 48 hours, and the median hospitalization time was 4 days. One patient developed a urethral stricture and required a prolonged hospitalization. Postoperatively 90% of the patients voided within 24 hours and 94% voided without the need of intermittent catheterization within 2 days. Only one patient required a suprapubic catheter for 1 week. No major complications were recorded in this series. Combined transurethral resection and cryotherapy, as proposed, is a good and safe option for the treatment of adenoma of the prostate with a short convalescence, low morbidity, and good hemostasis.Q: How to design a class with more than one interfaces Let us say we have one main interface IMethod. And a class has multiple interfaces like say IMethod1, IMethod2, IMethod3. How can we design and what are the best practices of designing such a class. ie. A method I am calling should be generic with the interface. eg
