This technology is currently being used by the English Premier League team, Leicester City, to build a predictive AI intelligence system, which learns from successful and unsuccessful football matches. They have created an AI system based on the data collected from their matches, and it is today used by the team's coaches to make tactical decisions. Additionally, FIFA 22 introduces the Physically based Trajectory (PBT) Engine, which can create more realistic ball physics based on real-life player movements. Whilst the game has not been officially announced, its gameplay footage from an early beta build has surfaced online. Read More: [The Witcher 3: Wild Hunt Gameplay Features in Detail \[VIDEO\]32](#)
