Ann Wagner said she's committed to repealing the Second Amendment and getting rid of school bathrooms because she says "they're too dangerous" for students to use. The Rep. Wagner made the comments Tuesday on conservative radio host Steve Deace's show. Wagner said she doesn't like the Second Amendment and has no plans to change it, even though she believes the U.S. should have armed services — and that she's "personally committed to repealing the Second Amendment." She also said she's "personally committed to getting rid of" schools bathrooms for "transgenders" and "little kids" because they're "too dangerous." "It's just common sense," Wagner said.
